StreamWIDE Launches Cloud Offering for Operators in The Americas

Lyndhurst, NJ - December 19, 2011 – StreamWIDE, the specialist in next generation value-added telephony solutions for telecom operators, today announced the launch of its StreamWIDE Cloud offering to wireline and wireless operators in The Americas. The StreamWIDE Cloud offering enables service providers to deploy the most innovative voice services leveraging a SaaS (Software as a Service) approach. The company's spearhead product line StreamWIDE Messaging is already fully operational on the platform, enabling voicemail, auto-attendant services and many other voice messaging services.

With this new business approach, StreamWIDE targets small and medium-sized operators who want to benefit from the latest VAS platforms with a very short time to market and without investing in network infrastructure and equipment. Operators will benefit from minimum software activation fees and be billed according to their number of subscribers provisioned on the platform.

"The Americas' market is rich with a variety of fixed and mobile service providers but some of them are pitifully kept away from innovation due to limited R&D funds. Thanks to StreamWIDE Cloud, those same service providers can unbundle the services they offer from the infrastructure they run on, access the latest technology, differentiate faster on their local markets and increase market share" Pascal Beglin, StreamWIDE CEO.

Leveraging a straightforward activation and provisioning system, StreamWIDE can enable service deployment in less than a week. Network operators will configure and supervise their applications remotely and benefit from pre-shaped telephony and web interfaces. Data security and confidentiality will be ensured thanks to SIP trunk security, SRTP & TLS, VPN & encryption technologies and firewalls.
